In the Heart of Nature

Speicherteich Pond Loop

The Speicherteich Pond Loop starts at the middle station of the Jennerbahn and leads down to the large reservoir pond, where benches and sun loungers allow visitors to enjoy the view of the Watzmann. The path then winds through the forest back to the middle station.

The total duration for this route is about 45 minutes, giving hikers plenty of time to admire the beauty of the surroundings and relax. For visitors who do not take the cable car to the middle station, the fastest access to the reservoir pond is from the Hinterbrand parking lot in Schöna am Königssee.

THE NINE MOUNTAIN RANGES OF THE BERCHTESGADEN ALPS

Heart-shaped, nine mountain ranges frame the Berchtesgaden Valley and separate Bavaria from Salzburg. The Berchtesgaden Alps are particularly appreciated by mountaineers: Despite a long history of alpine activities and tourism, our mountains have maintained their intact and original landscape, the core of which has been strictly protected since 1978 by the Berchtesgaden National Park.

THE WATZMANN

The Watzmann is the dominant mountain massif of the Berchtesgaden Alps and the landmark of the Berchtesgaden region. Majestically towering over the Berchtesgaden Basin, the Watzmann is famous not only for its height of 2,713 meters but especially for its unique shape. According to a survey by the magazine

Bergsteiger, the Watzmann is even considered the most beautiful mountain in the world. Hikers and climbers find tours of all difficulty levels around the Watzmann massif, from easy hikes, such as to Grünstein, to high-alpine climbs like the Watzmann Traverse.

STEINERNES MEER

The Steinerne Meer is an impressive karst high plateau between the Watzmann massif, Königssee, Hagen Mountains, Hochkönig massif, and Hochkalter massif. The largest mountain range in the Berchtesgaden Alps resembles a sea turned to stone, with undulating, stony waves – hence the name Stone Sea. The Steinerne Meer is a popular destination for experienced mountain hikers. Numerous huts and marked paths make it an ideal area for multi-day hut tours. The breathtaking landscape attracts nature lovers like a magnet.

THE GÖLL

The Hoher Göll, with its 2,522 meters, is the dominant peak in the Göll massif. However, the Göll has much more to offer. The 2,340-meter-high Hoher Brett is an ideal peak for ambitious mountain hikers. Popular destinations like the Kehlsteinhaus and Jenner are also part of the southeastern extension of the Berchtesgaden Alps.

THE UNTERSBERG

The Untersberg is the northernmost massif of the Berchtesgaden Alps and is considered the most legendary mountain in the Alps. It lies in both Bavaria and Salzburg, with the border running right over the mountain. The pronounced summit plateau of the Untersberg is dominated by the two main peaks, Berchtesgadener Hochthron (1,972 m) and Salzburger Hochthron (1,853 m). Within the 70 km² massif, there are numerous caves, including the Schellenberger Ice Cave, which is open to the public, and the Riesending-Shaft Cave, the longest and deepest cave in Germany, with at least 19.5 km in length and over 1,148 meters of depth. This abundance of caves has given rise to numerous myths and legends surrounding the Untersberg.

THE HOCHKALTER

At 2,607 meters, the highest point of the Hochkalter would be the king of mountains in most Alpine villages. However, in the mountaineering village of Ramsau, it shares the role of crown prince with the mighty Watzmann. The Hochkalter, however, offers much to mountaineers and hikers: At its foot lie Zauberwald (Enchanted Forest) and Hintersee, with the Schärtenalm and Blaueishütte (famous for their legendary cakes) at half the way to the summit. Between the peaks of the Hochkalter massif lies the Blaueis, the northernmost glacier in the Alps and the only one in the Berchtesgaden National Park.

THE REITER ALM

To the west of the Berchtesgaden Basin rises the mighty Reiter Alm mountain range. The peaks of this mountain, also known as Reiter Alpe, rise up to 2,286 meters. The eastern part of the Reiter Alm belongs to the Berchtesgaden National Park. To the north, there is a military training area for the mountain troops. On the high plateau, among numerous alpine huts, stands the Neue Traunsteiner Hütte, a base for mountain tours on the Reiter Alm.

THE HAGENGEBIRGE

High above Königssee lies an almost untouched spot of nature: the Hagengebirge. Here, you won't find cable cars or groomed ski slopes; the huts are usually only accessible after hours of hiking. However, here you can experience a unique mountain world, discover rare plants and animals, and quietly observe chamois and ibex.

DAS LATTENGEbirGE

The Lattengebirge, the mountain range between the Alpine town of Bad Reichenhall, Bayerisch Gmain, and Berchtesgaden, are less well-known than their neighbors Watzmann or Untersberg. Its most distinctive feature is the Rotofentürme, better known as the Sleeping Witch with the protruding Montgela's Nose. The mountain range is characterized by traditional alpine pastures, as well as the Predigtstuhlbahn, the oldest remaining large-cabin cable car, which takes you from Bad Reichenhall to the Predigtstuhl, the northwestern peak of the Lattengebirge.
